Unisa offers a new degree in Human Settlements Management

The three-year BAdmin degree in Human Settlements Management will equip you with the necessary skills to specialise in matters pertaining to the improvement of human settlements in South Africa.

It is the only degree of its kind that allows you to study while you are working as it is offered through open distance learning.

It is aimed at students, public officials, managers and people involved and interested in public policy regarding informal settlements, townships and town development in municipal areas.

For further information please contact:

Ms Tonic Motsepe

Email: motsett@unisa.ac.za

How do I register?

Please visit www.unisa.ac.za for information on applying for admission online, registration fees and course information.

Why should I do this degree?

The qualification will allow you to identify and explain housing concepts, principles and processes regarding community development, sustainability and location.

It provides an excellent foundation for students who are considering a career in the field of human settlements. It will also provide insight and a sound theoretical basis for public officials and managers who are currently working in the field, but have qualifications and experience in other sectors.
